50-word

Why stop at a wedding video, Michael and Jackie figure, when you can document the entire process of getting married, from proposal to ceremony? But as family tensions ignite, the camera records a much different story than they'd bargained for. Can their marriage survive its first big obstacle—the wedding?

100-word

Michael and Jackie met at a party—it was accidentally caught on tape. Now that they're getting married, they have an idea: why not have a friend videotape everything leading up to the wedding—the families meeting, engagement party, wedding planning, etc.—and edit the funny parts together and show it at the rehearsal dinner? They recruit their friend to tag along with a camera and away they go. But when his family starts treating her badly and he fails to stand up for her, the lighthearted video becomes an unintentional documentary of a relationship falling into jeopardy.
